AA/B TEEN MARKET

• 12-19 year old are consumers and creators of trends.
• Strong influencers of household purchases
• Valuable target for advertisers
IMPLICATIONS

- Spend more yearly on items such as apparel and technology-related products.
- Exert more influence on household purchases over a number of purchase categories.
- Tend to be more brand loyal to a variety of groups, including personal products, footwear and food.
AFRICAN-AMERICAN MATURE

- These 55+ are a rapidly growing market segment. It is expected to increase 47.1% by 2010.
- Mature are seeking products, services and activities that help them fully enjoy life.
- Socially conscious matures often base their purchasing decisions on the company’s contributions to their communities.
- Religion and church serves as a spiritual and social support and information center.
IMPLICATIONS

• Companies who respond to the social consciousness and spirituality of this group are more likely to capture their attention.
• Creative approaches to reaching the segment, such as through the church and the Internet, will also be successful.
• Messages should contain a celebration of African Americans’ maturity, recognizing their desire to fully enjoy life.
AFRICAN AMERICAN INSIGHTS

- African Americans have a unique cultural experience in the U.S., as many of them are in the U.S. today as a result of being uprooted from their homes and societies in Africa.
- They suffer a historical scar: the legacy of slavery, legal segregation, and discrimination sets them apart from other U.S. cultural groups.
- The Filter is a nucleus of black experience and culture.
- The Filter has also predisposed many African Americans to become overly sensitive about feeling stereotyped and not feeling valued, respected, included and welcomed.
AFRICAN AMERICAN INSIGHTS

• Race and ethnicity play a significant role in consumer-decision making.
• African American culture is one in which greater distinctions are made b/w outsiders and insiders.
• African Americans ranked “respect from retail employees” the 2nd most important factor (after price) when determining where to shop.
• Black consumers may switch brands if doing so is in the interest of the black community.
AFRICAN AMERICAN INSIGHTS

• Black women exert a lot more influence in spending than white women on a number of big-ticket budget items and are more likely to consider themselves to be independent-minded.

• African American consumers, more so than the other groups, prefer to shop individually.

• Culturally sensitive, positive appeals that celebrate the culture rather than reinforce stereotypes continue to be elements that are more likely to gain attention and loyalty.

• Oral traditions is a means of keeping their history alive.
• Networking and word-of-mouth communication are the modern day version of oral tradition.
  – African American college students prefer word-of-mouth for receiving product information
  – African Americans seek the opinions of family members more so than Anglo-Americans
• These types of communication are seen as more trustworthy compared to information heard from ‘outside.’
• Ties to the overall black experience, black ideology, and black nationalism are becoming even more important as African Americans have been reconnecting with their roots more so now than at any other time in the past.
KEY COMMUNICATION ELEMENTS

• Given the history of racism and discrimination, African Americans are often very aware of where particular messages come from.

• Important Elements in Communication Include:
  – Trust
  – Respect
  – Open-Voice
  – Black-to-black
  – Street Credibility
  – Black Nationalism
AFRICAN AMERICAN PREFERENCES

• The ability to purchase high end brands fulfills a social need for African Americans.

• Badge-Value: why they might be more inclined to have brand-name items

• Blacks have a different relationship with time.
  – The use of time in African culture is driven by Kairos time (meaning, as it comes up) and the characteristic African American need for instant gratification vs. being clock or calendar driven.
  – A common saying in the African American community when describing the apparent disregard for their own punctuality and to distinguish black folks’ timing vs. white folks’ timing is the phrase “CP Time” (Colored People’s Time).
  – CP Time is an inside joke within the community but is an unwanted stereotype when viewed from outside the community.

• African Americans tend to be adventurous with color (ex. Prefer blues and violets)

• Drawn to strong, saturated color, often in the red, yellow and brown families
  – This preference seems to be rooted in their African heritage
